Cairo

Cairo is one of the greatest cities to explore, but it is not a fairytale city, with beautiful minarets and picturesque bazars. Of course it has those, but they are not the essence of Cairo. Cairo is exciting, alive and with over 10 million people an overcrowded city.

The city of Cairo is also full of sights of different kinds. There are remains from the Pharaonic days, there are museums, there are loads of islamic monuments. See the special sights section for details for all these attractions.

Just walking around downtown and in the older residential parts inside the wall of the city where craftsmen work on the sidewalks outside their homes is also a real pleasure. It is easy to meet real Cairenes that are eager to discuss anything with you. Some of them try to lure you to their carpetshop, others are really interested and interesting to talk with.

Be sure to visit the bazar of Khan el Khalili to do some shopping, see shopping section for details.

Cairo – Eating Out

If you have the opportunity, go to the Felfela restaurant, near Midan el Tahrir: it is an absolute must. The food is excellent, inexpensive, and the atmosphere is delightful.

Look for Casinos along the Nile shore, especially in summer. These are places where you can relax outdoors, enjoy a snack and immerse yourselves in the unique Egyptian atmosphere.

Cairo – Shopping

Cairo offers great shopping opportunities. Not just carpets shops and hubblu bubblu salesmen, but also a modern fashion district. To wander around through the ancient shopping mall of Khan al-Khalili is a pleasure even if you don't intend to buy anything.

all

Fashion district

Cairo is the fashion center of the Arabic world and it is very interesting to have a look in the Cairo fashion scene. Most of the popular places are centered in Heliopolis. A number of new and hip boutiques have set shop, particularly on Horreya street (off El Mirghany), all in colorful and modern decoration.

For details on the trendy places, try out this site Sherry: wanna check out first

Khan-el Khalili

An absolute must-see in the city of Cairo itself is the Khan-el Khalili Bazaar, a warren of winding streets and twisting alleyways with an amazing number of shops stalls and carts. In many ways, the bazaar is the heart of the city. You could easily spend a day (preferably two half days) taking it all in. If youre planning on doing any shopping, be prepared to bargain shamelessly. There are wonderful brass ornaments and fixtures for sale as well as some of the loveliest mosaics you'll find anywhere. Though Friday is the Muslim holy day, many shops are open (Sundays see a lot of closings however). The perfume shops of the bazaar are particularly memorable; suffused with spice and floral scents and decorated with plush Oriental carpets and beautiful crystal chandeliers they're run by clerks who can mix any fragrance you desire.

Cairo – Books

The following books about Cairo are worth checking out before you leave and also nice to bring along on your trip. Especially the books by Nobel Laureate Naguib Mahfouz are worth checking out because of their detailed descriptions of life in Cairo.

Cairo – Sights

Cairo has many sights, enough for a week or two. Here they are divided into sections according to their nature.

Of all the sights you cannot afford to miss the Pyramids (would you consider skipping them?), the Spinx and the Egyptian Museum. They are the unique remainders of the oldest civilization of the planet.

Try to get a good taste of islamic culture as well by visiting some of the mosques and the old town. Visiting these sights will give you some understanding of the basis of present day life in Egypt. Furthermore the COptic quarter offers some interesting sights worth exploring. The city of death is a category apart and merits a visit as well.

Mohammed Ali Mosque

Not named after the boxer but after a ruler of Egypt, the Mohammed Ali Mosque in the Citadel of Cairo is one of the finest examples in its kind. Be sure to visit. The citadel itself is also nice.

Ibn Tulun

Ibn Tulun mosque is one of my favourites. A good example of the classical style of religious buildings in Cairo.

Al Azhar

Al Azhar Mosque and the university have been the focal point of islamic learning for the last thousand years and continue to be an important centre for islamic studies today. You can visit the university and the mosque and they are good examples of islamic architecture.

al Mu'allaha

The basilica 'Al-Muaallahah', meaning 'the hanging church', was built on top of the south gate of the Fortress of Babylon, hence its name. It dates as far back as the 4th century AD, making it one of the oldest churches of Christianity.

In 2004 a new tunnel under the church used by the early christians to run away in case the church was attacked.

Pyramid of Zoser

Another famous attraction that is not in Cairo proper is Saqqara site of the Step Pyramid of Zoser and a number of interesting tombs (a doctors tomb has depictions of surgical operations and the Serapeum has the now empty tombs of 25 embalmed sacred oxen). Saqqaras structures are much older than the Giza pyramids and the artwork in the underground tombs is more impressive than whats seen in the Cheops Pyramid.

The road to Saqqara is a site in itself past date plantations and scenic countryside. Get there early as the sight closes around 3 or 4 pm. Saqqara is usually seen in conjunction with tours of Giza or as a half-day trip from Cairo. Nearby at the ruins of Memphis (once the largest and most important city of ancient Egypt) lies an imposing statue of Ramses II. Unfortunately hardly anything else of this once great city remains. Also near Cairo is the Pharonic Village a living museum depicting everyday life in ancient Egypt. And if youre interested in health spas Helwan 16 mi/25 km south of Cairo has thermal baths

Papyrus Museum

The Papyrus Museum explains you everything about this ancient form of paper that was so important for the development of civilization. Beautiful examples of old papyrus documents.

Museum of Islamic Art

The Museum of Islamic art has beautiful examples of Medieval art form the ISlamic Empire. It is worth a visit fro those interested in the culture of Islam or for those who want to get away for a day from Pyramids, Sphinxes and temples.

Egyptian Museum

The biggest sinlge attraction within the city center for tourists is the Egyptian Museum. The sprawling sandstone building on Tahrir Square is packed with antiquities: mummies including the pharaohs Ramses II and III and Seti I, the contents of the tomb of Tutankhamens (King Tut) and many many other highlights from the oldest of civilizations. Dont overlook the excellent collection of Greek and Roman artifacts. You may want to spend more than one day here, or make it in two afternoons.

Blue Mosque

The Blue Mosque of Cairo is less impressive than the one in Istanbul, but still definitely worth a visit. Great Islamic architecture and a peaceful atmosphere where you can sit and relax and get away from the busy city.

St. George the Martyr

One of the more important churches of Coptic Cairo. Amidst a flurry of burning candles, art of many different styles, periods and media (metals, oils, and mixed media) you will find depicted scenes from St. George's valiant fight for Christianity. In the nearby Convent of Saint George there was also a dramatic chain ceremony that many people took part in as acknowledgement of the suffering and persecution of St. George and others.

St. Barbara

Founded in the 5th Century, the Church was rebuilt in the 10th Century and still retains its wooden door, a magnificent example of fine Coptic art.

Coptic Museum

The museum houses a rare collection of ancient Christian relics including remains of architectural works, textiles, icons and old manuscripts reflecting the history of Coptic civilization. The Museum has an official WWW home page. Click here

Christian and Judaic sites

And don't forget, there's also a rich Judaic and Christian history too. You can even visit the site where baby Moses was purported to have been picked up out of the Nile.

Cairo – Getting Around

Traffic in Cairo can be hell. Driving your own vehicle takes some guts. The best ways of transport are taxis and the subway system. Buses tend to be very overcrowded with people hanging out of the doors and it is often hard to find out where and when they are going.

all

Airport

Cairo International Airport is 23 km from the city centre. Transfer by coach or taxi, taking 30 mins but much longer during rush hour.

Airport departure tax: E£ 19

Latest check-in time: International 90 mins, domestic 30 mins. There is an airconditioned bus that goes from the airport (on the far side of the parking lot) to behind the Egyptian Museum for 2LE+0.5LE per piece of luggage. It is worth the walk to save the hassle of dealing with the airport taxi's.

Taxi

Taxis are metered. Insist that the driver uses the meter or fix a price in advance. Keith Hekman: The taxis in Cairo have not used their meters for years. They work quite well, but it is the riders responsibility to know the fare in advance. When you arrive to the place, get out, and hand the exact change back through the window. Then walk away. The driver may complain, but ignore him, if you know you have given him a fair price. I have found that most of the taxi drivers are nice. The key is self confidence (and a little bit of Arabic helps as well)

Cairo – Nightlife and Entertainment

Cairo has always been famous for its nightlife. And although some of it is a bit rundown, although all the bellydancers are from Russia and although the Gulf Arabs coming over for weekend brides are not your favourite clientele, there is still a lot of fun to be had at night.

I would suggest you skip the big expensive western hotels and try to go to one of the casinos along the Nile river.

Cairo – Things to do

In the neighbourhood of Cairo you can do quite a few activities. These include camel safari's in the desert, Felukka rides on River Nile and other things.

Desert Trips

Various travel agents in Cairo organize jeep safaris into the desert, where you can escape the immense noise pollution of Cairo and at the same time enjoy the silence and mystical beauty of the desert. If you're not part of a tour, you'll need to access a 4x4 in order to explore the desert. A nice excursion would be to take horses from one of the stables (mentioned on this page as well) and have a barbecue in the desert or maybe even spend the night there. The people at the stables can give you all the details about it. Spending a night out in the desert is an experience you shall never forget: the stars, the vast areas of sand, the silence, and to top it all off, the chilly air of the desert by night covered up under the spell of a mysterious moon.

Horse back riding

Another trade mark of Cairo is to go horse–back riding in the desert. If you take a left on Pyramids Road, about one kilometer before you reach the Pyramids, the same way you would go to the Sound and Light Show, you'll find a large number of stables with foreign names to attract tourists. i.e. AB Stables and EuroStables. Most of the stables have really good quality horses, a lot better than the ones you'll find right by the Pyramids. Many rich Egyptians who own horses keep them here to be looked after. The prices range from 20LE to 40LE, depending on the horse and on the stable. What's nice about this place is that it's located at the edge of civilization, beyond it are miles and miles of pure desert, so if you like horses and are capable of riding them, you can enjoy an hour of nothing but gallop. The best time to ride is during sunset, and if you're up to it, riding by night is ecstatic. While riding be sure to ask the guide to take you up the hill, where you can catch a superb view of the Three Pyramids and the Sphinx. loren: dont know

Sailing

When in Cairo, you're bound to notice 'feluccas' sailing up and down the Nile with their huge white sails. A 'felucca' is an ancient Egyptian traditional sailing boat. In the old days they were used for both transport and trade. Today, sailing trips on feluccas are reserved for tourism and entertainment. You can get a group together and rent one for 30LE an hour. You'll find boarding places nearby the Meridian Garden City Hotel and the Helnan Shepard Hotel. These feluccas are interesting because they sail throughout the waters in the heart of Cairo and the scenery can be quiet nice in the evening. The drawback however is that the area is a bit noisy and the feluccas have a small restricted area which they cannot leave. Another option is to take a felucca from the suburb of Maadi, 10 km south of downtown. It's a lot more peaceful there with the surrounding greenery of the Nile. Another advantage is that there is no restriction on Maadi feluccas, so they can take you on longer tours, all the way up to Helwan.

Hash House Harriers

If you're a Hasher you'll want to join the Cairo Hash while you in town!

Cairo – Orientation

The biggest part of Cairo is on the East bank of the Nile. The Pyramids and the Sphinx are on the West Bank. Zamalek is a small residential island in the Nile. If you are in Cairo for any length of time, Zamalek has several western-style grocery markets which may be less intimidating for an out-of-towner than those in downtown. Zamalek is also home to the one and only Gezira club, which occupies much of the island. The Opera house is also on Zamalek, and is a very nice stop if you have the time.

Avoid Midan Talat Harb unless you want to be mobbed by touts— but most of the rest of downtown makes lovely walking. The leafy streets of Garden City are just minutes away from where most tourists stay in downtown, but they are off the usual touristy path, and a lovely change from dusty downtown. On the other side of the Nile, Mohandaseen is mostly a residential district, but it has some nice places to grab some tam'mia and fatir or whatever.

If you are really adventurous, Mu'qutum (the hills to the east of Cairo) is a great place to go spend an evening smoking sheesha and drinking asir aseeb

Cairo – Movies

Cairo is the center of the Arabic speaking world when it comes to the production of movies. The movie festival held in Cairo is the biggest event in its kind in the Middle East. Although local movies are probably quite hard to follow for the average tourist, they often give a nice idea of the local culture. Although it might be a nice idea, you don't even have to go to the cinema to see these films. Older movies are shown all day on TV, in bars and restaurants.

For a (foreign) woman it may not be a wise idea to go to a film alone, especially if the film contains scenes that according to Egyptian habits may be considered explicit.

For more info on the Cairo International Film Festival check this site.
