Rio de Janeiro

Rio de Janeiro is one of the most beautiful and spectacular cities in the world. The best way to appreciate the setting is by going up Sugar Loaf Mountain (Pão de Açúcar), where you'll get a spectacular 360-degree view of Rio and Guanabara Bay. Notice how the natural harbour is surrounded by lush, high mountains that meet the sea in the world-famous beaches of Copacabana and Ipanema. Continue up to the famous statue of Christ the Redeemer on Corcovado Mountain to get an even higher perspective. You can either drive or take a funicular up to the statue the best view is on the right-hand side. From up here you can see that Rio is divided by a mountain range into two areas: the Zona Norte (North Zone) and the Zona Sul (South zone). The Zona Sul holds most of the city's sights, including the Sugar Loaf and the famous beaches. Across the bay is Niteroi.

One of Rio's most precious resources is often overlooked: its people. Brazil is a melting pot of races, colors and creeds. No one race, color or religion dominates in Brazil. There is room for all, and that includes the many visitors who come to Brazil each year from every corner of the planet. Cariocas are particularly warm and fun loving. Schedule about three days and four nights to explore Rio and on a hot day you can escape to Petropolis.

Rio de Janeiro – Beaches

The most beautiful beach in Rio you will find in Barra da Tijuca. At least that is the opinion from Maria Barbosa.

all

Copacabana

Famous from the song this beach is divided into a number of postos (sections), where the lifeguards are located. Each section is known for a certain type of people, for example, artists, gays, young people etc. The safest area is probably in front of the major hotels as the Meridien. If you come to Rio you cannot give a miss to this celebrated curved beach. The beach is only four sq km.

The name Copacabana has a Bolivian origin. Historians trace it to a XVII century image of Our Virgin Lady of Copacabana, brought by the Portuguese from a small village around distant Lake Titicaca. It was installed in a chapel that would later be demolished for the construction of Forte de Copacabana.

Until the late XIX century Copacabana was a distant area covered with sand, dunes and shrubs – not unlike Barra in the 60's. A small fishermen's village concentrated most of the dwellers. The neighborhood only started to grow with the opening of Tunel Velho, connecting it to Botafogo and Downtown.

The inauguration of the Av. Atlantica along the beach around the 1900's was a major turning point. When Copacabana Palace Hotel opened its doors in 1923, romance and glamour became Copacabana trademarks. Neoclassical and art-nouveau skyscrapers (4 to 12 stories high) added a touch of sophistication and wealthy Cariocas started to move to the suspended mansions.

Copacabana today is one of Rio's most democratic and eclectic neighborhoods. There are penthouses and apartments along the beach that are easily worth more than a million dollars. There are also buildings with as many as thirty tiny studio apartments on the same floor, and no parking garage.

Copacabana is perfectly suitable for walking tours, as it is basically flat, and distances are relatively small. To better understand the diversity of the neighborhood we suggest you take your time, and use one or two days exploring all possibilities. Copacabana has a little (and sometimes a lot) of everything, and there's fun for everyone. Here are some of our the things you don't want to miss:

Right next to Forte de Copacabana you will find the fishermen's corner, with a tradition of over 100 years. It is an amazing concept that fishermen actually make a living right in the heart of one of Rio's most urban areas. Come before sunrise to watch the action – seeing to believing. You may even help to pull the fishnets out of the water. Fresh fish are for sale at the stand every morning. Don't forget the photo among the fishermen's boats on the beach sand...

Lido's bustling nightlife is an attraction apart. The area concentrates some of Rio's most famous strip clubs and bars. They are hard to miss with the neon signs at the door, and usually a window with suggestive photos of dancers. Boite Holiday, Frank's Bar, Cicciolina, Pussycat, Scotch Bar, Niko's, and Baccara are also part of this circuit, and each one has a legion of fans. Paul: Beyond the five star hotels, you'll find nice places to eat. You'll also have to dodge beggars, thieves, endless aggressive street vendors and tons of attractive (drugged) hookers and the rich European older men that prey on them on the beach. Recommendation; if you're not there to see this then go to the Barra.

Ipanema

Ipanema is another beach connected with the Copacabana. Ipanema is a little bit less built-up than Copacabana and the beach is probably cleaner. Praia de Arpoadar at the Copacabana end of Ipanema is a great place to watch the surfers. There is no artificial light at night. Jo Lehl: A dream at 3 o'clock in the night.

sitting at the coconut hut, sipping on a cold beer and see the yellow lights of the fawelas. After one night of fear, I loved it. hendrickx :

Rio de Janeiro – Eating Out

Rio has restaurants to suit every taste and budget with options for every size of group from two to many hundreds. Eating out is a major attraction with the Cariocas themselves so you can expect the best, be it that you choose top quality French cuisine, or something more traditionally Brazilian, such as barbecue or a filling feijoada.

Carnival

Carnival in Rio is the only real Carnival. Everybody is out dancing in the streets. Participants plan (and save up for) their colorful exquisite costumes for a year (though some costumes seem to be little more than glitter and one or two sequins). The best costumes can be seen on Sunday and Monday of Carnival week in the specially constructed SAMBÓDROMO (in downtown -- subway station Praça Onze). The shows start at 8 pm and continue until 8 am! Buy your tickets well in advance. Carnival is a must at least once in a lifetime.

The dates on which Carnival (Mardi Gras) happens depend on a religious calendar (Roman Catholic Church). The Carnival (Mardi Gras) starts on Saturday and ends on Tuesday.

New Year's Celebration

The Copacabana beach is also home to Rio's famous New Year's celebration. It attracts over 2 million people from all over the world! Following a local tradition, most people dress in white for good luck. Offering a white flower to Yemanjá, the goddess of the seas, is also a part of the ritual. The exquisite fireworks festival starts at midnight, lasting almost a half hour. With white sand and waters that are never rough, this is also a very popular beach for sunbathing. During the summer international championships of beach soccer, volleyball and other sports are promoted in arenas along Copacabana Beach. Some beach kiosks are open around the clock, offering refreshments and snacks. Cross the street and explore the beachside cafes, restaurants, and night clubs along Av. Atlantica.

Rio de Janeiro – Getting Around

There are a number of possibilities to get around in this big city. You can either choose from different types of buses, use the efficient metro, hire taxis or rent a car.

By Metro

The Metro is a very efficient way of going from one place to another. It is air conditioned and clean. There are two lines. It operates from 6 am to 11 pm on working days, but only from 2 pm – 8 pm on Saturdays. Closed on Holidays. There are different tickets, so go to a ticket counter and find out the one that suits you: single, multi or integrated bus & metro tickets.

By taxi

Taxis have red number plates with white digits and meters. There are some smaller types with a taxi sign on top. As a general rule make sure that the meter is switched on Tariff 1, except between 11 pm and 6 am or on Sundays and holidays – then the more expensive Tariff 2 is used. IMPORTANT: Only use taxis with an official identification sticker on the windscreen. Complain if the route is too long or the fare too much. Radio Taxis are recommended because there are supposed to be more reliable.

Rio de Janeiro – Getting There

all

By bus

Buses run from Rio to all parts of the country. It is advisable to book a ticket in advance. There are a number of travel agents to book a ticket, for example, go to Itapemirim Turismo, R Urguaiana 10, loja 24. Call 5098543. The agency is located in the centre. The central international bus station is reached by bus from all parts of town. Some buses serving it are buses no. M94 and M95.

By air

There are hundreds of flights from all continents and South America to Rio. Domestic flights arrive or leave from Santos Dumont airport. International flights go to Antonio Carlos Jobim International Airport (earlier known as Galeao). There are taxis and busses running into town from both airports. Some taxi companies have fixed rates, but it is rather expensive. You pay for the car and not for the number of passengers, so if you can share a taxi you can bring down the cost to less than $-US 10 for four passengers.

This bookstore is highly recommended for Rio's best collection of foreign books. It is located at Avenida Rio Branco 185.

Guanabara Jornais e Revistas

Rio de Janeiro – Sights

There is much more to see in Rio than Copacabana. The city hosts numerous interesting museums, some great colonial buildings and impressive churches. A must-see is Sugar Loaf Mountain (Pão de Açucar). There are also numerous galleries with good works of Brazilian artists. The best way to explore the city is by foot, as you will get a good taste of what Rio is all about. Public busses are generally very good, but they are difficult to navigate as there is no route map. If you are visiting for a short period of time, it might be worth making longer trips by taxi; they are not very expensive, especially for Americans. The subway (Metrô) is another good and safe option for getting around the touristy areas, and at R$ 1,80 (approximately US $0.60) it's a bargain.

Hotel Copacabana Palace

Rio's most glamorous hotel, Copacabana Palace has played a major role in the social and cultural life of Rio de Janeiro since it opened its doors, in the early 20's. The project by architect Joseph Gire was inspired in grand European hotels like the Negresco in Nice, and the Carlton in Cannes. Edith Piaf, Nat King Cole, Rock Hudson, De Gaulle, Eva Peron, Queen Elisabeth (and Charles and Diana), Walt Disney... the list of VIP's who have stayed here is endless. It was the setting for the Fred and Ginger's Flying down to Rio. Even books have been written about it. If you cannot afford to stay here, you can at least enjoy an afternoon tea by the pool, or maybe a meal at outstanding restaurant Cipriani.

Bairro Peixoto

This landmark art–deco district right in the middle of Copacabana's delicious urban chaos is a haven of peace, preserving a small–town atmosphere. Buildings are 4–stories high or lower. There is a quiet square where the elderly play chess next to children in the playground. There is a youth hostel in the area, and Bairro Peixoto is also popular with international budget traveler. Walk a few blocks and you are on the main street or the beach.

Lido

The area between Copacabana Palace and Av. Princesa Isabel is known as Lido. It concentrates a number of landmark art–nouveau and neoclassical buildings, a living memory of a glamorous past. Masterpieces like building Itahy on Av. Copacabana 252 are not to be missed (photo under the mermaid). Many of these buildings have huge 5–bedroom apartments with only one bathroom and no garage, as parking on the street was the norm. Most were adapted to other uses by language schools, and other businesses.

Rio de Janeiro – Practical Information

all

Safety

Rio has some pretty significant problems, like poverty, corruption, and gang warfare, but the city is working hard to fix them. There is a tourist police along the beach, and this has significantly helped the city's image. Be careful and carry only as much money as you can afford to lose. Please do not wear any valueable i.e. expensive watch with you and the best is to dress like the inhabitants do. When its getting dark it is recommend not to walk along the beach, lots of youth gangs are using the dark for holdups. It is in general better in the night to drive with offical taxis and always recommended to ask which areas or streets are not safe for tourists. If you want to use a camera, put it in a simple brasilian supermarket plastic bag. Wearing a backpack be sure to fix the zipper with wire that nobody can open it in the crowd.

Language

Portuguese is the local language, but it is different from the Portuguese spoken in Portugal. Few people outside of the tourist industry speak English. Spanish is helpful to know, as many words in Portuguese are the same, but pronounced differently.

Rio de Janeiro – Things to do

Beyond the sightseeing, Rio offers a number of pleasant and relaxing activities, including:

- Listening to live Bossa Nova at the Butiquim Carioca in Botafogo, or at Severina in Laranjeiras
- Getting a fresh fruit juice at any corner juice stand ... caja (wow!) caju, graviola, fruta do conde, manga or just plain suco de laranja
- Going for a drink at night at Praia Vermelha, next to the Sugar Loaf

- Going to Rio's Porcão in Flamengo for a "rodizio" ... a steak and meat feast. There's also the seafood rodizio at Mariu's in Leme
- Samba dancing lessons or going to an ensaio or baile (of Beija Flor, for example) at the Scala
- Having lunch at Albamar and then taking the boat over to Niteroi for one of the best views of Rio, from the "Saco de São Francisco" beach
- Eating a steak sandwich at Uruguay, Posto 9 at Ipanema, while admiring the perfect bodies
- Watching a football game at Maracanã stadium
- Eating good, fresh sushi (for example, at Sushi Leblon or Tanaka)
- Playing or watching football and foot-volley at the beach ... either at Ipanema, Copacabana or Leme ...
- Watching the sunrise at Arpoador and then going for a run or bike ride at Ipanema or around Lagoa
